Preface

Creationism is the belief that the entire universe and all of life were created in a special act by a Creator. This is based upon the Genesis account of origins and the special creation of life within a seven day act of creation as described within Scripture. Creationism generally states that creation was originally made in a good state and is, over time, deteriorating and getting worse.

During the last 150 years, this belief has been challenged by another belief called Evolutionism. This belief follows a materialist philosophy of existence and follows the Big Bang Theory for origins and the Theory of Evolution for describing life. It generally states that, over time, things are getting better.

Both sides of the creation and evolution debate have the same scientific evidence to examine and study. This notebook is meant to help a person go through many individual topics of study which show that the evidence supports Creationism and not Evolutionism.

Scripture

Believers want to build their relationship with the One Most High and grow closer to Him. The relationship with the Almighty grows the same way as any relationship, by spending time together and getting to know each other better. One of the best ways to do this is to read His words that are written to His people, which are recorded in the Scriptures. There are many philosophies, cultures, and ideas that want to take attention away from the Almighty and have believer's forget the truth about creation and life. By knowing and understanding His word, believers can stand strongly in the truth and resist what is false.

"For thus saith the LORD that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited: I am the LORD; and there is none else." Isaiah 45:18

Science

Science refers to either the entire collection of knowledge gained by mankind or to the scientific method used for gaining that knowledge. The knowledge of science includes what can be observed by the senses and, therefore, only deals with the physical world and universe. Models are often made to explain an event or phenomena. The scientific method is a process by which models and ideas are carefully tested. It includes the steps of observation, research, hypothesis, prediction, experiment, and review. The main categories of science include the physical or natural sciences that study non-living matter, the earth sciences that focus exclusively on the planet Earth, and the biological sciences that focus on organisms including plants, animals, and mankind.

"The works of the LORD are great, sought out of all them that have pleasure therein.
{3} His work is honourable and glorious: and his righteousness endureth for ever."
Psalm 11:2-3

Physics

Physics is the branch of science that studies forces, properties of matter, and the fundamental laws of nature. Physics study includes the topics of light, magnetism, heat, and electricity which have produced understanding and scientific laws regarding thermodynamics, motion, and the conservation of mass energy. Measurements within these topics and application of these laws give strong support for a young Earth only thousands of years old. The laws of physics also give support to a special creation by displaying a universe that is wearing out and deteriorating rather than improving and building up.

Chemistry

Chemistry is the section of science that examines the properties, composition, and structure of elements, molecules, and compounds. There is an emphasis on how these items react, transform, and exchange energy when interacting with each other. The field of chemistry demonstrates the youthfulness of the universe through the lack of reaching equilibrium and it also shows a special creation through the existence of the medium to heavy elements.

Astronomy

Astronomy is the scientific study of the physical universe beyond the Earth. Astronomy is one of the oldest of the sciences. It has been used in making calendars and in the understanding of daily, monthly, and annual cycles of heat, light, and gravity. There is often an emphasis on the relationship of the Earth with the Moon and this solar system. Measurements of planets, moons, stars, and galaxies all show the youthfulness of the entire universe.

"He telleth the number of the stars; he calleth them all by their names. {5} Great is our Lord, and of great power: his understanding is infinite." Psalm 147:4-5

Geology

Geology is the scientific study of the Earth's land forms and the processes by which it is shaped and changed. There is an emphasis on the processes of deposition and erosion that have formed the surface that is known today. It also studies the chemical composition of inorganic elements and minerals formed by heat, crystallization, and pressure. The rates of erosion, deposition, and decay found on the Earth are consistent with a young planet and not one that is billions of years old.

Hydrology

Hydrology is the section of science that studies the physical characteristics, mechanics, and dynamics of water as well as its effects upon the Earth. Special attention is given to the hydrologic cycle close to the surface of the Earth. Available water is one of the strongest factors in a habitable environment for life. The action of water has produced the Earth's current surface features more than any other physical process and gives strong evidence for a worldwide flood

"The earth is the LORD'S, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein. {2} For he hath founded it upon the seas, and established it upon the floods."

Meteorology

Meteorology is the branch of science focusing on the Earth's atmosphere and weather. It focuses on both the structure and the dynamics of long term atmospheric patterns as well as the day-to-day activity in the lower stratosphere. The field of meteorology gives support to a special creation and a worldwide flood through the drastic changes that have occurred in the atmosphere over time.

Botany

Botany is the branch of science that studies the physical properties of plants. Plants are complex organisms with a substantial impact regarding life, especially in terms of converting solar energy into food and the conversion of carbon dioxide into oxygen. Plants are strongly affected by the climate and landscape and yet are capable of also affecting weather and environment. The fossil record of plants give strong evidence to both a young Earth and a worldwide flood.

"(Gen 1:29-30) And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat." Genesis 1:29-30

Anthropology

Anthropology is the study of mankind and cultures in science. It includes the fields of biology, linguistics, society, culture, and archaeology. The fossil record and the record of languages give strong evidence to a special creation of mankind and not the evolutionary development from a primitive animal.

Secularism

Secularism is the rejection or exclusion of religious considerations. Secular Science examines the existence of a universe that has occurred without a God or some type of Designer. It often follows a Big Bang Theory for cosmology, a Natural Origins Theory for the Earth's formation and development, and the Theory of Evolution for biological life.

Life

Life is precious! The answers to the great questions of life begin in a relationship with the Creator. Without this relationship, the value and beauty of life is easily lost or overlooked. Only after this relationship is established can life truly improve and grow in depth and meaning. The ways to truly encourage life include knowing the reality of creation, having a close relationship with the Creator, being responsible in the covenant relationship, having a righteousness that comes only through accepting the Messiah as Savior, and resisting the evil that exists in the world.

"And the LORD God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." Genesis 2:7
